

That was Naomi Watts pushing her 2-year-old son Alexander in a grocery cart yesterday while they started their Thanksgiving shopping at the Whole Foods on the Lower East Side.

More celebrity photos at nypost.com

Topper the evening

TOPPER Mortimer seems to be happily separated from wife Tinsley Mortimer. On Tuesday night, the blue-blooded banker was cheerfully conspicuous in his gray pinstripes among the leather-clad bohemians packed into Rose Bar for a “secret show” by indie post-punkers Elefant. At one point, he laughed it up with hard-partying rocker Jamie Burke and his scraggly haired pal, the vice president’s nephew, Bloody Social guitarist Jamie Biden. The following night, Topper schmoozed with guests at the dinner at the new East Side Social Club for the dress collection of his little sister Minnie. But Tinsley’s mom, Dale Mercer, is as unhappy about the split as ever, a spy insists. She clearly wants her daughter to dump German Prince Casimir Sayn-Wittgenstein and get back together with her husband. Mercer was at Bar 675 the other night saying she still speaks to Topper every day and that the prep-school sweethearts are a perfect couple.

We hear . . . we hear

THAT immigration lawyer Michael Wildes — the outgoing mayor of Englewood, NJ — has just been hired by Ms. Universe 2008, Dayana Sabrina Mendoza Moncada, to secure her American citizenship.

Face time

TODD English seems to be doing OK in the aftermath of his dust-up with Erica Wang. Last week, a Page Six spy caught the celebrity chef “sucking serious face” with a “leggy 20-something” at Brass Monkey Bar in the Meatpacking District. “They were all over each other,” says our spy. English left Wang at the altar earlier this month amid allegations that she had slugged him.

Her husband, Tom Brady, was playing the Jets this weekend, but pretty and pregnant Gisele Bundchen made time to play with his 2-year-old son John Moynahan in Boston.

Ian Nolan/Splash News